Assess your security risks

Question

Yes / No

Best practice

Are you aware of all of the security risks faced by your business?

A security risk assessment can identify where your key security vulnerabilities exist, and also assess the likelihood of a security incident occurring.

Are you aware of the mitigation methods required to prevent harm to your people or any other negative effects on your assets, operations or reputation?

A security risk assessment can identify where your key security vulnerabilities exist, allowing the security specialist to recommend and implement the required mitigation strategies.

Are you aware of the threats faced by your personnel when travelling to lone or remote sites, or when travelling internationally?

A travel risk assessment can identify the key risks faced by your remote staff, and also can identify mitigation strategies to avoid harm to your personnel.

Are your travelling staff prepared to deal with natural disasters, civil unrest or any other unforeseen circumstances when travelling, either domestically or internationally?

Travel safety and security training will enable your employees to plan and prepare for their journey, conduct individual risks assessments to ensure they are aware of and can avoid hazardous situations and deal with any personal security issues that they may face.
